EMPRESS Re-Designed for Cruises

By the installation of a permanent tiled swimming pool, increased deck space, and a new Cafe, the Empress of Australia, famous former world cruise liner of the Canadian Pacific, is being fitted for her three months West Indies cruise season in 1936.

The whole after-end of the 21,000-ton, three-funnelled liner is now being remodelled in England, and the structural changes being carried out will result in the addition of many square feet of deck space on "A" deck, an enlarged shelter promenade on "B" deck, and a spacious Cafe facing a tiled open-air pool, which will be the central feature of the new sports deck. The tiled swimming pool will have an area of 700 square feet. It will be 25 feet long and 40 feet wide. Gay umbrellas and comfortable loungers will be dotted about the deck for sun-bathers, and provision is being made for an additional full-size deck tennis court. The "A" deck extends to the stern of the ship.

1936 schedules for the Empress of Australia, in addition to the West Indies season of five cruises, leaving New York in January, February, March, and April, provide for a number of Scandinavian and Southern cruises during the summer. To provide additional comfort during the months the Empress of Australia's passengers will spend in tropical temperatures, additional ventilation is being provided for. Bathrooms are being added to a number of the bedrooms.

The Empress of Australia's West Indies cruise departures from New York will be January 12th, February 12th, March 21st, and April 9th, for cruises of 18 days, 16 days, and 10 days in length. Photographs show a merry tea party, a before-dinner gathering on the new shelter deck, and a deck quail game.

HOCKEY NOTES

Standard 1—Arrowwood 13

Uncovering an overpowering offensive in the first period of the game Monday night, the local Seniors went on a scoring spree, to ring up a total of 8 goals before the period ended. The local Cardinals looked particularly impressive during the first period of play but were sadly disorganized during the second period. In the third period the locals found their bearings and banged home a few extra counters before the Standard Club was able to tally. The visitors showed their lack of condition but with practise they should give a very good account of themselves. All the Cardinals featured in the team's victory.

A Tense Situation

As the Italo-Ethiopian war progresses, and with economic sanctions imposed by the great majority of the members of the League of Nations gradually tightening, the situation in Europe becomes increasingly grave.

The danger of a few days' respite to the little more than a colonizing venture of Mussolini in North Africa at the expense of one of the black races, developing into a world conflagration of even greater magnitude than the Great War of 1914-18 with far greater losses and more fearful consequences to civilization seems more imminent with the lapse of time.

While intelligence reported from Europe indicate almost daily fluctuations of this world peril there is no gaining the fact that once again all Europe is an armory with all nations anxiously watching the trend of events and the more powerful ones ready to assume the offensive or defensive as circumstances may require or politico-national exigencies may warrant.

One day despatches contain news which reveal a dreadful maelstrom into which the nations are being sucked willy-nilly, with or without their desire. Two or three days later the news is more reassuring. The crisis of the moment has been bridged. People breathe a little more easily and await the next hair-raising development, reasonably sure that it will soon appear.

And so it goes from day to day. A situation develops which brings tension and alarm. Ominous threats are uttered. Diplomats hastily exchange notes and conversations, threats are withdrawn or modified or "explained". The tension eases. The peril has been averted momentarily at least, but the black shadow remains and will continue to exist until it is either spelled entirely or becomes a terrific substance.

It hardly seems conceivable that when Mussolini put his threatened invasion of Ethiopia into execution he could have been aware of what was to follow. He must surely have assumed that the League of Nations would be split asunder when its members were faced with the question of carrying out their obligations to prevent or punish violation of the territory of another member or that some of the stronger members would be willing to put a telescope to a blind eye rather than fulfil their duties and run the risk of precipitating a situation which might lead to a general conflagration.

If that was the viewpoint of the dictator of Italy he guessed wrong. If he thought he could bluff the dominating powers of the League, again he guessed wrong. It would have been the easy way out for the League to have begged the question whether it was bound to permit Mussolini to have his way in North Africa, knowing that the imposition of sanctions might lead to a very dangerous situation. They did not, however, but took their solemn pledges seriously and decided to implement them. Action followed decision.

The peril lies not so much in the mere fact that the League has imposed economic sanctions and is making them effective but in the possibility of some of the members winking in their position, or of abandoning the position they have taken because of danger from other quarters or because it may become advantageous to do so.

And Mussolini himself is in a dire predicament. He has now gone too far in his adventure to recede without imperilling his position among his own countrymen. In fact, recession would spell disaster for him at once. On the other hand he cannot expect to carry his campaign to a successful conclusion with a great majority of the nations cutting off his supplies, but defeat in Ethiopia would terminate his career as Italian dictator. On the horns of this dilemma, it can be assumed that Mussolini will leave no stone unturned to disrupt the accord which exists among the nations who have combined in imposing economic sanctions on him.

Mussolini unquestionably knows that there is an unrest against British rule in India and Egypt and that the Moroccans and Tunisians would welcome an opportunity to throw off the French yoke. If by stirring up trouble in these countries he could excite the energies of these two great powers into other channels it would be of distinct advantage to the Italians.

For it is quite conceivable that the outbreak of strife in these countries would be the precursor of troubles and warfare in other countries and might develop into the long-prophesied conflict between the Christian countries of the world and the nations which bow their heads to Mohammed.

While it is difficult to forecast what combinations might result from a split in the ranks of the nations now engaged in preventing the culmination of Italy's act of aggression, because of the many diverse interests involved and the ramifications interposed among them, the situation is fraught with peril which may well cause apprehension even among many peoples who at the moment appear remote from danger.

He was one of the earliest surveyors in the west. He had a splendid command of the English language.

May Grant Privilege

Australian Women Likely To Act As Jurors In Court

Before the year closes women might be acting as jurors in Australia, also sitting on the bench. The minister of justice of New South Wales, L. O. Martin, has promised to introduce a bill to give women that privilege.

They would not be presiding magistrates, but act as assessors in industrial courts. They would be permitted to express to the presiding magistrate, with becoming brevity, it is hoped, their opinions on the cases.

The desire to do this has long held a place in the thoughts of women who are active in public affairs, and they are bent upon translating ambition into fact. The children's court is their first objective. They claim that they better qualified to deal with young children than the ordinary magistrate. The children's court, however, deals with cases of youths aged 15 years, as well as with younger ones, and even women advocates admit that a man is better able to deal with some older juvenile offenders than a woman.

They argue, however, that a woman's presence, coupled with that of a man, in the man presiding, might be beneficial. Past and present magistrates do not all agree with that opinion. There are women justices of the peace, of course, in Sydney. Certain ardent feminists ask why they should not sit on the bench, but not even male justices of the peace sit on the bench in Sydney. It is said in quarters most familiar with the working of the courts that they never will.

Alberta Rhodes Scholar

Mark McClung, Son of Canadian Author, Receives Award

University of Alberta Rhodes scholar for 1935-36 is Mark McClung, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. McClung, of Winnipeg. The new Rhodes scholar's mother is the Nellie McClung, noted Canadian authoress. Award of the scholarship was made recently.

A student in honors philosophy, Mr. McClung's campus career was marked by brilliant scholastic success. He has been at the University of Alberta for five years and during that time has taken active part in student affairs.

The new Rhodes scholar expects to leave for Oxford in the fall and intend to spend three years overseas. A brother, Jack, solicitor in the provincial attorney-general's department, brought a similar honor to the family on conclusion of his career at the University of Alberta by winning the L.O.B.E. scholarship which enabled him to spend a year in the Old Country.

Savings Deposits

Have Increased Almost A Million Dollars Since Post War Period

Savings deposits in Canadian chartered banks on Oct. 31 amounted to $1,465,041,708—almost $100,000,000 more than on the corresponding date in 1924, according to the latest statement of the banks to the department of finance. There was $21,000,000 increase in deposits since last September 30.

Current account deposits also showed a marked increase, being up $35,000,000 in the month and more than $80,000,000 as compared with Oct. 31, 1934.

Deposits outside Canada were up about $40,000,000 in the month and more than $80,000,000 in the year, accounted for in a large measure by the increasing deposits of money from other than Canadian in Canadian banks, which are shown in this column.

Current loans in Canada were down some $15,000,000 in the month and $40,000,000 less than a year ago, while call loans were also down.

License Fees From Radio

Amount Received From Owners About Same As Last Year

Collection of license fees on radio receiving sets during the current fiscal year has been running about on a par with last year, the total revenue from this source was slightly less than $1,500,000. Beginning with the fiscal year 1935-36, the fee has been $2 for each receiving set.

In spite of the depression and the fact that radio owners on relief have been asked to forego their license fees, collections have been between 90 and 95 per cent. complete, officials at Ottawa said.

Cost of collection has been about an average of 15 cents for each $2 license with a general overhead of 5 per cent.

Insinuates New Service

Japanese Department Store Has Opened Free Marriage Bureau

Not content with merely imitating the merchandising practices of the West, a large department store in Osaka, Japan, has instituted a new service for customers. A free marriage bureau has been opened in the store. There men and women who desire to marry may register and furnish pertinent information about themselves.

Marriage in Japan usually is arranged by families, rather than by the couples who are to be joined. Through go-betweens who receive a commission for their services. The new bureau will take over the work customarily done by the go-betweens.

There is a business reason for the establishment of this free service. The couples who meet through the bureau will purchase their wedding outfit at the store—New York Times.

Radio Inquiry

Parliamentary Committee May Hold Investigation

A parliamentary committee may be established when the house meets in January to investigate radio broadcasting in Canada, particularly the administration of the radio commission, it was learned recently.

It was understood every phase of broadcasting would be probed into, including the position of regulating, instead of a general manager, broadcasting of public men. It is probable also of a commission of three.

During the campaign Mr. Macdonald King took exception to certain broadcasts under the name of "Mr. Sage" and promised reform of broadcasting regulations to stop abuses of public men. It is probable the "Mr. Sage" broadcast will be investigated.

Two hundred pounds of mail was unloaded and speeded to the post-office for delivery, while Capt. Edwin Musick, skipper of the flying boat, and his eight-man crew were welcomed by officials.

Recipe For Youth

Live In Present Is Advice Of Famous Humanist

George A. Judd, the humorist, tells how to be young at 70. "Live only in the present," he said. "That's the secret. I caught myself reading obituary notices recently before I turned to the sport page, and that is a sign of age," Judd admonished. "But I won't let myself become a moribund and a has-been so I keep the old bean in touch with the latest news, the latest plays, the latest movies, and the latest books."

Edwin Thomas Howes, eccentric Londoner, lived a miser's life and starved himself, but hit his pipe every morning with a one-pound note. He continued the practice until his recent death.

No Substitute For Butter

It Is A Concentrated Energy And Heat Producer

Butter is one of the foods which has been widely used for many centuries, but whose true nutritional merit has only recently been brought to light, according to a recent publication of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Recognizing the importance of adequate amounts of fats in diet and the valuable contributions made to health by butter, modern scientists uphold the generous use of this superb fat.

Palatability and high food value are the two qualities which earn butter the distinction of being "the fat for which there is no substitute." Fats recommended for their tasteless, proper health little or no interest for the woman who prides herself on her cooking. She knows it is butter that makes cream sauces look and taste so rich; it is the butter used in cakes and cookies that evokes praise from friends; and, similarly, it is butter that insures excellent flavour and colour in many dishes prepared for the family table.

As for food value, butter is a concentrated energy producer, yielding 2½ times as much heat in the body as the sugar and starch foods. This is a strong argument in favour of using plenty of butter, particularly during cold weather when the body requires extra heat. Butter is easily digested and readily and completely assimilated by the body; it contains small quantities of lime and phosphorus, and in addition has a high vitamin content which distinguishes it from most fats. It is an exceptional good source of Vitamin A, which builds up resistance to disease and promotes normal health and growth. Butter is also one of the few foods which provide Vitamin D—the sunshine vitamin—so necessary for the development of bones and teeth.

SYNOPSIS

Here is an absorbing and exciting story of a fight against stubborn prejudice and a bitter personal rivalry of a girl and a man battling ridicule, sabotage, bullets, and the treachery that would turn them against each other.

The story opens with Link Fleming addressing a meeting of Boone County cattlemen, called together with the object of forming an irrigation company.

(Now Go On With The Story)

"Thus Link Fleming knew that to get Roper to his dream was to spell success. Only Kligo could swing ranchers into line for irrigation. He was now carrying out his promise of yesterday that Link would present Soak Torney, the drink-brickened civil engineer he had discovered in an Alta saloon. A nerve sholt of the man he had once been, he still was as enthusiastic about irrigation barren land as Fleming himself.

"Helen is a regular fighter," Kligo grinned at the crowd, putting his arm around young Hamilton. "I'm for him too, 'cause I reckon yuh all know his sister and me are—Well, he said embarrassed, 'Helen will be back in town party soon, and maybe then she'll tell me yuh out about our plans."

"But that's off the track now, I don't go in for fads as you men know, and maybe irrigation is a link, tell us about it, reckon that's what yuh got us here for, a'n't it?" This was his chance, his long-sought opportunity to win the ranchers to his views! He had prepared for this moment for a year. Enthusiasm swept over him as it always did when he pondered the new means of improving the range. His pulse sped faster, and standing at full height before them, he chose his words with care.

"If you men could raise alfalfa to feed your stock winters, and use your manure gran in the summer, you wouldn't need to worry whether the government passed rules about the foothills or not."

"We ain't farmers. We're cattlemen!" Roper snarled.

"Well, something's got to be done, because we're going to be barred from the foothills, and our range is too thin to support steers all year round. Water the waste land that's all around us yuh can grow alfalfa enough to feed your beef and

1. By stimulation through the skin, it is a poultice or plaster.
2. By infiltration of its penetrating medicated vapors, released by body heat and breath, it directs to inflamed air-passages.

Continuing through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm—soothes the inflamed membranes—helps break congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

maybe have some left over to sell. The secret is, irrigation!

"I've got seventeen hundred acres that hasn't been good for anything. It isn't worth as much as ordinary range, and grass grows only fifty cents an acre. But if I water that wasteland—"

"It was a swift exchange of surprised, doubtful, and questioning looks. Kligo lifted a bushy eyebrow at his friend and ranchman, Jack Mel. The proprietor of the Half Moon Saloon kept his face a mask but nodded slightly. His lean, wiry fingers toyed with the watch chain of shiny nuggets draped across his flowered vest. Fleming, from his raised position, followed the significant looks and felt a flash of uncertainty. But perhaps it was only his habitual suspicion of the Box 50 owner and his suave cigar, a cold blooded killer.

"From fifty cents to a hundred bucks an acre is pretty long talk," Soak Torney declared skeptically.

"Yeah, dammin' yuh water costs money. How do yuh figure to finance it, Link?" Honest John Mulrooney required.

"By forming the Boone County Improvement Association. We'll all buy stock according to the size of our spreads. That will provide capital for the irrigation ditches and dams."

"Well, o' course," Kligo pointed out, "here's no use to farm an acre of section until we're shure the thing'll pay. Way it looks to me, we oughta have the judgment of some of our experts. Boys, here's some listen!" to Soak Torney.

"Soak engineer's all over the world. He can tell us about Link's scheme, whether it's hard to make, Fleming watched the men react.

"Reckon Soak knows plenty about irrigation, at that," Mulrooney commented.

"Buzz, yuh go along on whatever we decide? How about you, Benno?" All right, Kligo, he'll hear his facts."

The Star Look owner realized that perhaps he had misjudged Kligo. He was being honest, now, and seemed really anxious to know more about irrigation, which he had so derisively opposed during the last year. Yes, Kligo was hard to make, but he was an injustice. Roper wasn't as bad as he was painted!

The important thing was to seize upon the word "honest." He beckoned to Torney. "Come on up here and tell us about it, Soak," he invited as he turned to his friends.

"You're the man knows about water!" had. We want your opinion."

All eyes watched the ragged, unshaven, and somewhat haggard man rise from his chair and begin to shuffle forward in his furtive, bang-dog way. Vague apprehension made Link feel he had done the man an injustice. Roper wasn't as bad as he was painted!

However—Fleming shrugged—it was merely Torney's endorsement as a civil engineer that was needed to clinch the support of Boone County ranchers. He appeared sufficiently in control of his senses to give that. Perhaps, what damage could he do, even in his present condition?

"What's your idea on this?" Link asked. "Could we build an irrigation plant here?"

The man wet his lips while he blinked self-consciously. "Reckon you can build it anywhere you want."

Roper grinned at him sardonically, and nodded. "How much would a proposition like this cost?" Link went on, drawing him out.

The engineer rubbed his reddish nose as he studied the front of him. "About thirty thousand dollars for a starter. You could build part and operate it while yuh raise more money to go on with scheme."

"Raise more money? That? What do yuh mean? What's the total?" Howland demanded.

"Around sixty thousand."

Several men gasped. "If you want your land to increase in value I'll take some investment, of course. But we all chip in it won't be so bad. The thing is sure to be worth while," argued Fleming.

There was a slight pause. "That's the point," Roper drawled slowly. "Will it be worth while? If it will, I've about made up my mind to go in it. How about you boys?"

He gazed from face to face. Several men frowned hesitantly, then nodded. If there were any jobs to be had, he'd take them. He trusted Kligo's leadership, they feared to oppose it. A few looked grim and several appeared reluctant. But the Box 50 owner's declaration applied to all of them. As usual, they would do what he did, follow him like sheep.

"That's settled then. Me—I'm willin', like yuh boys, to gamble on Torney's say-so. Should we go ahead with irrigation or stay out? That's the thing in a nutshell. Ain't it, Link?"

"Exactly, Now, Soak," he went to striving to get triumph out of his voice, "how about it?"

Torney swallowed hard. He cast a furtive, pleading look at Fleming. His brawny gaze, however, to hold as it riveted on Kligo and the cold-eyed Jack Mel as he answered in his husky, half-audible whisper.

"You could build dams and raise alfalfa—sure. But it'd be a crazy fool thing to do. Irrigation sounds all right, but it's nothing but a new-fangled way to waste money."

"Roper's said all along this ain't any good," he went on hurriedly. "My advice to you men is to stick to Roper. Yuh've heard him, yuh're convinced."

Then sudden anger waved over him, and with both fists clenched until the knuckles showed white, he spoke in a low, intense tone. "Somebody's tampered with Torney. That's what I feel, and I'm sure. Why, he's told me a hundred times irrigation would do wonders for us all. We've worked on this thing, drawn up blueprints, even. Sounded like a good idea. Soak, made him say what he did!" he cried insistently. "I tell you men yuh're going to regret it if you don't listen!"

An Expensive Privilege

Player Who Makes Hole-In-One Deserves A Reward

The doubtful privilege of buying drinks for everybody, which used to be the custom of the club, for all golfers playing a hole in one stroke, is being abandoned in London, Eng.

In future they will be rewarded for accomplishing the feat.

The ambition of all golfers, a hole in one, invariably cost at least $25 in drinks and entertainment to fellow players, and the pleasure of doing it thereby was minimized.

"It wasn't so bad in pre-war days when whiskey cost less than a dollar a bottle, but now when it sells around $2.50, a hole in one is pretty expensive."

So the Wilderness club, Kent, has decided that the player doing a hole in one shall be entertained to a meal with full liquid trimmings.

In addition, his green fees, if he is a visitor—and his caddy fees will be refunded.

"We feel that the player who does a hole in one deserves his reward," said Major W. H. Hodgson, secretary of the club. "The last time that happened on this course it cost the player $55. It was the 18th hole, and naturally a good deal of interest was caused."

Mossleigh Wins League Opener

A crowd of Mossleigh fans went into a frenzy of excitement when the Mossleigh sextette defeated the Arrowwood Cardinals by a 3-2 score, to capture the first game of the Blackfoot League schedule. The game proved to be as close as the score would indicate, giving the margin to the western club. At all times the winners seemed to play a well organized and effective style of hockey which carried them to victory. With the score now-swinging back and forth the crowd were held in tense interest and it was not until the final minute of play that the issue was settled. Carrying the puck all the way Hugh Leslie proved to be the hero when he slammed the 3rd counter into the Arrowwood cage to make the score 3-2. On the evenings play the winners were full value for their victory and the Mossleigh club will make things interesting for any of the other teams in the Blackfoot League.

Stranger: You're 38.
Smart Guy: Well! That's right, but how did you figure that out?
Stranger: I have a cousin who is just half as crazy as you are and he is 10.

United Church Notes

Building a life is by far the most important and also the most difficult task that faces any of us. Many are building shacks when they should be building mansions. In Jesus teaching one universal mistake is vividly portrayed and the way to avoid it is suggested. This part of Jesus' teaching will form the basis of Sunday morning sermon, 'The Peril of the Vacant Soul,' at the United Church. This is a vital question for every individual and ignorance regarding it the cause of so many almost useless lives.
